Dear Friend Ottley:

I was wondering why I have not heard from you. I sent you a leather bound volume of my book and trust you received it and liked it. Do you care to give me a testimony of same. I would appreciate it very much.

I am preparing another book, Arthur, on the life of Louis Cyr and all the dope you can give me on him and any photographs you have of him or of August Johnson, I would be awfully obliged if you would loan them to me. If you know any information on Pennell or Barre I will also be glad to receive same. If you will do this for me right a way I would appreciate it very much as I would like to get started within the next week or two.

Gosh darn it Art, I was just saying to Mark Berry last night I'd give anything to see you. I get so lonesome to confide with you that it seems too bad that you are so far away. If we only had work down here, where we could be together, what a darned good time we would all have. I wish it would be possible for me to get away for a few days to come and see you.

Do you hear from Mike Ford, he wrote to you quite a bit.

The sport is quite dead in Pittsburgh since we left, but I wish we could get together again.

I was over in Canada for two weeks and got back a week ago. Phyllis has grown to be a big girl. She is over five foot and strips over a hundred pounds and is perfectly formed.

They all wanted to know about you and Ethel and the children, and I told them what I could.

Now old man, let me hear from you very soon.

Your Old Pal,
